Nigerian In Britain Industrial Relations

LONDON — A study course in Britain for a senior Nigerian Union official is proving a "most valuable experience" - and nothing has interested him more than the month he is now spending on attachment with the Ministry of Labour Central Office for Wales.

He is Mr. R.A. Lawal of Kaduna, who is Assistant General Secretary of the Northern Nigeria Civil Servant Union. With him on his thirteen-weeks visit to Britain, sponsored by the Department of Technical Co-operation, are seven other overseas union officials.

"The value of the course lies in the fact that it covers the completed field of industrial relations, including the structure and functions of trade unions personnel management, wages staff training and industrial rehabilitation; Mr Lawal told our Correspondents yesterday Tuesday.

Since his arrival in Britain on January 20 Mr. Lawal has attended lecture courses at the London Headquarters of the Ministry of Labour and of Trades Union Congress. In Cardiff he has had discussions with labour and personnel officers in both private and public enterprises. In his more specialised field as a member of the Staff Side of the Whittles Council Mr. Lawal spent an afternoon discussing common problems with a British member a senior officer of the Ministry of Labour.

Britain's New Unified Ministry Of Defence

LONDON — Britain's new unified Ministry of Defence began work from its new headquarters in London on Wednesday.

The new Ministry will absorb the existing Service Departments — the Admiralty, the War Office and the Air Ministry. It will have a Secretary of State for Defence at its head, assisted by three Ministers of Defence (Arm., Navy and Air Force).

It has been established under new legislation and is intended to strengthen the central organisation for Britain's defence. The reorganisation will improve the central control of defence policy, the arrangements for formulating weapons requirements, and the means of controlling research and development. It also aims of greater efficiency and economy by creating the opportunity for a common defence approach.

The new Ministry, with an annual budget of nearly £2,000 million, will have responsibility for 400,000 Services personnel and as many civilians.

With its creation, the ministerial appointment of First Lord of the Admiralty, Secretary of State for War, and Secretary of State for Air will be abolished.

The changes do not affect the Armed Services which will preserve their separate identities as the Royal Navy, the Army, and the Royal Air Force.

Although the Ministry of Aviation is not brought within the new unified Ministry, there will be the closest co-operation. The Minister of Aviation and many of his chief advisers will be located in the Ministry of Defence building.

Carrington For Rangoon

LONDON — Lord Carrington, the Cabinet Minister who will lead the British delegation to the 10th anniversary meeting of the S.E.A.T.O. Ministerial Council in Manila this month, is also to visit Rangoon, Kuala Lumpur and Saigon.

The Foreign Office spokesman announced yesterday that the Lord Carrington, who is Minister without Portfolio in Sir Alec Douglas-Home's Government, will take advantage of his presence in South East Asia to make official visits to these other capitals.

Lord Carrington will leave London on April 6 and hold talks with government leaders at Rangoon and Kuala Lumpur before attending the S.E.A.T.O. meeting. He will visit Saigon on the way back to London.

Mbutu's First Visit To Britain

LONDON — General Joseph Mbutu, the Army Commander of the Congo, is expected to visit Britain towards the end of April. He is expected to be accompanied by his wife, Mrs. Mbutu, and his two children, Leopoldine and...

During his stay as guest of the British Government from April 12-14, the General will visit military establishments in the city. This is his first visit to Britain.
