ALLEGED DELAY IN THE ISSUE OF TAX RECEIPTS

Because of recent allegations that there is undue delay by the Inland Revenue Department in issuing tax receipts, the Department has issued a statement in which the facts are given. The position is that the Commissioner of Income Tax cannot issue a tax receipt until the tax has actually been paid to him. In all cases where tax has been so paid receipts have been issued, or shortly will be issued.

The delay in the issue of receipts occurs when employers deduct tax by instalments from the wages of their employees and account to the Inland Revenue Department, who on receipt of the tax issue receipts for delivery to the individual employees.

Some employers fail to comply with the Inland Revenue Department's instructions as to the month in which deductions are to be made, and fail to account promptly to the Inland Revenue Department for the tax so deducted.
