STORM OVER OSOBA

Awo To Go To Court
He Says "Okorodudu Is Partial"

(By Our Roving Correspondent)

Lagos—I was informed last night by some members of Action Group of Nigeria that their leader, Chief Obafemi Awolowo, who is appearing for himself as counsel at the Coker Commission may likely swear to an affidavit in the Federal Supreme Court this coming Monday to set out some facts to show that Chief Michael Okorodudu, Q.C., Official counsel to the Commission, has no right to be there as a counsel.

Chief Okorodudu was as far back as 1957 Commissioner for the Government of Western Nigeria in the United Kingdom.

Chief Awolowo told the members of the Commission that Okorodudu was trying to use the Inquiry as an opportunity to show his personal animosity against him. Moreover, the Chief added, there were some facts in their favour which are being held back before the Inquiry.

Mr. Nzeogu said Chief Okorodudu was wasting the time of the Commission by calling Chief Osoba to come and give evidence. Osoba has been sentenced in law Court and "this is not a higher court for retrying Osoba's case."

Not Proper

Another lawyer who is battling hard for removal of Chief Okorodudu as counsel for Coker Commission was Mr. Godwin Nzeogu. He said there was a personal element "which makes Chief Okorodudu not to be the proper person to be sitting there."

Nigerian Ministers' Interest In British
Local Government

LONDON—The four Eastern Nigerian Ministers now touring Britain as guests of the Commonwealth Relations Office, spent over two hours discussing local government administration with officials and councillors at Alcester, Warwickshire, learning how the district and its 16,000 people are governed, how the rates are collected, the services run and the amenities provided.

The four Ministers are Chief Douglas Jaja, King of Lagos; Mr. J. M. Abacha, Minister of State, Premier's Office; Mr. J. M. Abacha, Minister of State, Finance; Mr. Philletus Faimte, and Mr. Daniel Amies Edoho, Provincial Commissioners of Yenagoa and Uyo Provinces.

The Clerk to the Council, Mr. J. F. Smith, showed his visitors round the town, and took them to a new housing estate near the town centre, where over 300 of the 1,350 houses owned by the Council have been built, with shops, new council offices and a community centre.

The Ministers thought this estate was delightful and were impressed by the open spaces and playing facilities provided for the children," said Mr. Smith.

Later the Ministers were entertained to luncheon by the Chairman of the Council, Councillor S. H. Pritchard.

During some days spent in and around Coventry they are visiting the Massey-Ferguson agricultural machinery factory, touring a mixed farm, seeing milk bottling and juice bottling plants. They will also visit the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre at Stratford-on-Avon to see a performance of "Measure for Measure."

They will be conducted on a sightseeing tour of Coventry's new city centre and the new cathedral recently consecrated in the presence of the Queen.
