British Public's £200,000 For Earthquake Victims

London—Donations to the British Red Cross for aid to the victims of the earthquake in Iran passed the £200,000 mark yesterday. Some sixty volunteers worked alongside Red Cross staff in London to handle the flood of letters.

The money has been pouring into the Red Cross headquarters from people in all parts of Britain following a television appeal last week.

A Red Cross spokesman said that thousands of letters remained to be opened.

More clothing from Britain for earthquake victims is due to arrive in Tehran today. One ton is being flown from London free of charge by the British Overseas Airways Corporation for the "Save The Children Fund."

Sandys Pleased With Ministers' Conference

LONDON—"I am very pleased indeed with with outcome of the conference," declared the Secretary of State for Commonwealth Relations and the Colonies, Mr. Duncan Sandys, at the end of the Commonwealth Prime Ministers' Conference yesterday.

He went on: "Throughout the Conference the Prime Ministers of the Commonwealth have expressed their hopes and fears with absolute frankness.

"They have had discussions on both long and short term issues. They have not only examined in great detail the particular problems affecting each of their countries. They have also together scanned the broader horizons and have sought to make a positive contribution to the solution of some of the great problems which face mankind.

"After much plain speaking they have issued an historic declaration embodying their agreed views.

"This constructive statement will help to clear the air on many misunderstandings and should be of real help to Britain and the Six in the remaining stages of the nagotiations in Brussels."
